Dr. Murray of Morley, Alberta is at present looking after the patients at the Blackfoot hospital.

An optimist is a bird game hunter who enjoys hunting in the miserable weather Thanksgiving Day.

Mrs. H. H. Ellis and son, Howard, of Lethbridge, Missouri, have been in the district the past several weeks visiting friends. At one time they lived on a farm some twelve miles north of town and some years ago moved to the States.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Anderson who have been residents of Gleichen for the past several years left for Edmonton last Thursday night where they will in future reside. Mr. Anderson who is best known here as the "Rough Man" has retired from that business and will take charge of the office work with an aluminum company. He sold his house here to Ray Koshchuk of Cluny and sold it through an advertisement inserted in The Call. Mr. Anderson said he had numerous enquiries through the ad and could have sold the house several times.

Mr. and T. H. Beach left last week for Saskatchewan to visit their son Pat, wife and family.

Thanksgiving Day was a miserable day for a holiday, with rain, snow and wind. The town was unusually quiet until late in the afternoon when many cars were to be seen parked on the main street.

Dr. Windsor who has been confined to the hospital at Cremona, B.C. for some weeks suffering a leg broken in two places, was reported due to leave the hospital last week for Calgary.

With shorter periods of daylight approaching with rain, snow and winter save driving is urged. Motorists are urged to make a special effort to avoid accidents and cut down the toll this season. At the same time, it is the duty of pedestrians and others on the highways to take all necessary precautions to avoid accidents. Six out of every 10 traffic deaths occur after dark, it has been revealed in a recent traffic survey. This again demonstrates the fact that many of the driving hazards lurk in the night hours when extra driving care should be exercised.

THE WORLD OF WHEAT

By H. G. L. Stange director "The Crop Testing Plan"

A distinguished scientist called upon by the other day, Dr. H. C. Trumble, of the University of Adelaide, South Australia. He told us about a very wonderful new white wheat, the plant, breeding institute had developed in Australia by the same of Wario, which is resistant to all stem and leaf rusts, smut and mildew.

Canadian plant breeders too, with the new wheats Redman and Hecate are making great strides. Our research laboratory at Winnipeg has developed also two new outstanding oats which are completely resistant to all present forms of stem and leaf rusts. The kernel is of a nice size, and these new oats have other favorable qualities that will suit the farmer. One of these new oats is called R.L. 1272, and is a cross between Victory and R.L. 524. The other is called R.L. 1275, and is a cross between Victory and R.L. 1272. It is highly probable that one of these new varieties will soon be accepted and licensed. Seed for general farm use, however, will not be available for a year or two.

What inalienable benefits farmers derive from our highly talented plant breeders. It is evident, however, that our government must be generous in supporting the work of our own Canadian plant breeders so that we may ever keep one stride ahead of our competitors.

Such defensive steps to defeat that long-term "Progressionism," are found necessary by most men and women who realize that so often the duty put off until the morrow is never done.

For the average citizen in Canada, buying a Canada Savings Bond is a proposition much different than was the purchase of a Victory Bond war days. Because of the unprecedented size and urgency of the sale organization behind Victory Bonds drew very few people in the Dominion were lent entirely to buy on their own initiative. Sooner or later a salesman turned up at the office or at the home and placed an application before his prospects and extended his fountain pen for the signature.

Salesmen will call on a number of Canadians in behalf of Canada Savings Bonds, but thousands upon thousands of those who buy this time will have to make up their own minds and act on their own.

For his latter sizable group, the old-fashioned motto, "Do it Now" will serve in good stead.

1919 And 1946 A Comparison

Recent rumors and misleading statements about control have caused considerable misunderstanding and have intensified the concern already felt by consumers over the recent increase in the cost of living.

However, to straighten out the rumor mongers, a timely comparison of what has happened after the First and Second Great Wars is interesting. In August, 1916, one year after the Second Great War the cost of living index showed that prices had risen 24.6 points since the war's outbreak. In November, 1919, one year after the close of the First Great War, when there was no price control system, the index had risen 68.3 points above its immediate pre-war level. Moreover the inflationary spiral continued until it reached its highest point in July, 1920, when prices had almost doubled.

While there is reassurance in this comparison, it also gives grave warning of what could happen if the present intense pressures against the freedom and privileges which it

(BY WALTER SIEBER)

Genuine democracy reaches far deeper into life than merely giving its citizens the right to express their choice of rulers by ballot. Its basis is the moral principle of the concern of each for the welfare of all.

This mutual concern for the welfare of the whole must be freely and voluntarily given by its members. Force, or coercion is alien to the spirit of democracy while it is, an ever-present ally of dictatorship rule. At the present time we seem to be engaged in a popular movement of organizing ourselves into "Special Interest Groups." Laborers, farmers, manufacturers, income-tax payers, and even professionals of various kinds are becoming highly organized groups. While the movement is intended to better the economic position of each group, it may easily become the thing that will make government overtake the rapidly vanishing wall that separates democracy from bureaucratic dictatorship rule today.

No fault could be found with this movement were it not for the overlooked fact that it means the development of a group struggle that such a group struggle must destroy the moral principle of common concern for the welfare of all which has to give away for the welfare of the group in such a struggle. Thus the basis of democracy is being seriously undermined.

Restrictive laws affect these group struggles which are today becoming highly selfish, or any other type of restraint applied by force of any kind would place our democracy in a position of standing at the back door with its hand on the doorknob while, marching through the front door, it takes over the nation's affairs, would be some sort of fascist dictatorship, something we do not want in Canada or any other place in this small world.

Democracy can only be maintained so long as all its component parts, or groups, obey the moral laws that are inseparable from the enjoyment of the freedom and privileges which it

Grave danger lies ahead for us whenever individuals or groups seek to gain a position of advantage over the rest of the nation. Due regard for the welfare of all the members in a democracy must ever be exercised. All too frequently this idea prevails that along with democracy's freedom must go the privilege of unbridled struggle for position, wealth, power, without regard for the moral law of our democratic life. Whether we like it or not—it is this that threatens democracy today with disintegration and is a far graver danger than Communistic (falsely so called) ideology.

These moral obligations rest with equal weight upon the shoulders of employee and employer alike. In fact it must rest upon all who have an economic stake in our common wealth of life. Before serving themselves they must fulfill democracy's obligation to serve the public, or common welfare.

Our economic set-up is already badly disoriented and out of gear. We are more than a little handicapped in our effort to regain our foreign markets because of strikes. Our whole democratic system is losing face at home and abroad. Farmers can scarcely keep machinery going for lack of repair parts or replacement of worn-out machines, and other industries have to shut down for lack of material essential to them because our whole economic system is terribly interdependent.

Labor seeking its fair and just share of reward is a struggle which can be condemned by no right-thinking person. But is there not some other way than these paralyzing strikes by which the goal can be reached?

All groups possess the legal right to strike, but is there not also a moral obligation resting upon all—labor and industry—to consider the welfare of the general public? Cool strikes in winter could bring sufferings and death, and other tie-ups could create as great a hardship.

Some system of procedure by which labor, industry, the consuming public and finance had a representation should not be impossible to achieve, its findings would have the force of law and be binding until revised. Certainly democracy is too precious to allow it to drift into dangerous currents.

Haul out your odds and ends, they'll bring you a profit through want ads.

National Parks Of Canada

The foresight of the Government of Canada in setting aside national park areas has proved very effective in conserving the wildlife of this country. A notable example is the saving of the buffalo from possible extinction.

In the early sixties, it is claimed, there were millions of bison, or buffalo, roaming the plains of North America. Some thirty years later, because of the relentless slaughter for profit, for sport, or simply for the lust of killing, buffalo had become quite scarce. The story of the saving of this magnificent species is closely bound up with the establishment of Canada's national park system. Today there are 28 national parks covering an area of approximately 20,000 square miles and all are wildlife sanctuaries. One of the smallest, "Elk Island National Park" is central Alberta, measuring 50 square miles, is frequently referred to as "the new home of the buffalo."

Elk Island Park was set aside in 1906 to preserve the wolf, or elk, which was fast disappearing. Later the Canadian authorities decided to move the herd of buffalo temporarily established at Elk Island to a fenced reserve at Wainwright Alberta. Some forty animals were so wild that they could not be captured. Descendants of that small but vigorous group now comprise one of the finest herds on the North American continent. Under the sanctuary conditions provided, other big game species such as elk, moose, deer and moose share this ideal range with the former Monarchs of the plains.

Bird life is very abundant in the park, which is one of the most important ant sanctuaries in the west. A spectacular sight in autumn is afforded by thousands of birds preparing to migrate south for the winter.

It was only to be expected that a national museum of big game animals such as this would become an important tourist attraction in recent years. Elk Island has developed into a favorite summer playground. Facilities for the enjoyment of sports are numerous and varied. The recreational centre of the park is at Sandy Beach, located on Astotin Lake. Sandy Beach is a long stretch of fine clean sand which affords excellent opportunities for swimming. Amusements such as swings and seesaws are provided for the children.

Smallest of all national park golf courses but certainly not least in popularity is the nine hole lay out on a rolling plateau southeast of Astotin Lake. Small ponds are interesting hazards on this course and fine views may be had of Astotin Lake, the rolling plateau and Beaver Hills. From the fairways buffalo, elk, moose and male deer may be seen in their native surroundings.

One of the most popular recreations in the park is boating. Canoes and other water craft may be rented from a boat livery which operates during the summer. A beautiful grove facing the lake, equipped with a large number of tables, benches and other conveniences, is a favorite spot for picnickers.

Although there is no hotel or luggage accommodation in the park, many visitors during the summer of 1946 brought along their own camping equipment and lived out of doors. A public camp ground on the eastern side of Astotin Lake, not far from Sandy Beach, is well equipped with kitchen shelters, stores, tables, and benches and has fire wood parking areas and other conveniences.

Elk Island has become a very important link in the chain of Canada's national parks system. No only is it helping to conserve wildlife but should continue to attract visitors in increasing numbers. During August of this year the number of visitors entering the park was more than double that of the same period last year. Many of them are able to adorn their snapshot albums with interesting mementoes of their visit to the range of "one of the most magnificent quadrupeds that ever trod the earth."

The powerful position which Britain's aircraft industry holds today has been brilliantly demonstrated at the greatest aero show ever held in the United Kingdom. 3000 buyers and experts from almost 50 countries saw more than 50 different types of United Kingdom military and civil aircraft and thousands of exhibits displayed by some 200 United Kingdom companies, manufacturers of aircraft, engines and components. The exhibition, organized by the Society of British Aircraft Constructors, was designed not only to show the world something of the industry's wartime and peacetime achievements but to act as a spearhead to its new export drive. The industry's target is $50,000,000 annually for the next three years. This compares with $27,000,000 before the war. The Aero Show alone is confidently expected to result in several million pounds worth of orders for delivery within the next 12 to 18 months.

OUR COMPLETE SHORT STORY—

THE CURE

— By —
BASCOM H. BIGGERS III

Wheeler Newspaper Syndicate

SOME of the folks at Gloverville were certain that a miracle had happened to Miss Sadie. Others claimed that she had taken some wonderful medicine. Still others thought the old man that stayed only one night at her house was a famous doctor travelling in disguise.

Every one had his own private opinion about what cured Miss Sadie and got her out of the bed in which she had spent most of her time for the past three years. But none of them guessed the truth.

When Miss Sadie—her real name was Mrs. Horace Manns—lost her husband and two children in the automobile wreck she lost all her faith and desire to live. Though most people didn't know her illness was largely mental, she didn't want to get well.

"There's nothing left for me," she said. "When Horace and the children were taken from me life lost its meaning. I didn't care to live, though I must until I die."

And the bitterness of her mind seemed to overtake her body leaving her no strength. She made no effort to rebuild her life, to regain her strength. A hired man who lived on the place and cooked for her kept up the little portion of the farm that she retained, but she took no interest in it.

Her old friends who stopped coming to see her could not be blamed. It was obvious in her grief and loss of faith that she did not want them. The only people who ever came to see her were the curious ones who carried away strange tales about how she kept to her bed, spoke crossly and glared at them like they were demons.

Slowly people began to suspect she was going crazy.

One day when the hired man had gone to town and she was all alone, there appeared at her door an old man. He was dressed in tattered clothes and he had not shaved for many days. His knock on the door was feeble and had she been sleeping she would not have heard it.

The window by her bed opened out to the front porch and she could see him there knocking. She was not frightened, because he was old and feeble looking. But she was irritated that he should disturb her.

"What is it?" she asked crossly through the half open window.

"I'm hungry," said the old man, "and very tired. If you will only give me a little food and let me rest—"

"I can't give you anything," she said. "Get off my porch and property."

There was a pitiful look in the old man's eyes as though the world had deserted him. As he turned to leave he opened his thin grey lips then seemed to decide against it.

He walked slowly back across the porch and as he reached the steps he suddenly collapsed and rolled down them to the walk.

Inside the house Miss Sadie saw the little old man as he fell to the ground and her heart rose in her throat. For the first time she forgot her own loneliness and bitterness. New strength seemed to rise in her. For only a minute she hesitated. Then she grabbed her robe, slipped quickly into her shoes and started for the door. Her movements were slow at first but as she thought of the little old man she forgot her weakness and moved rapidly to the yard.

He was unconscious when she reached him and breathing heavily. She lifted his small head from the hard walk and compassion welled in her heart. She had done this to him by ordering him away.

She lifted his body in her arms. Even though he was frail, she was weak and stumbled as she went toward the house.

"Poor little old man," she repeated over and over.

His only answer was heavy breathing as though he were having difficulty getting his breath.

Lying when he had undressed him and put his withered body between clean white sheets, she hurried to the kitchen to prepare some chicken broth. It was the first time in three years that she had fixed food and she found pleasure in it. When she returned with a bowl of the steaming beverage he had regained consciousness. She smiled at him and moved swiftly to his side.

"There now," she said, "you're going to be all right. You need not have eaten in a long while. This broth will fix you up."

"No," he said in a small voice. "No I haven't eaten in a long time. I did not want to beg but—"

His voice faded away as he tried to sit up and she saw it was too much for him.

"No more talking," she said. "And I'm going to feed you personally."

For the rest of the day she nursed the old man finding comfort in having some one to tend to. But when night fell she knew he was sicker than she had thought. She knew he would not live. His heart was weak with age.

All night she sat up with him talking so that he would not feel alone. She told him all about her youth and her husband and her children and it comforted him. And as she spoke she felt the burden of bitterness lift from her heart as it had not done in three years.

At dawn, just before the old man died he called her close and spoke in a whisper so low that she could scarcely hear him.

"I believe that you are the good Samaritan whom I have never before found," he said. "I know I am dying but I am doing so with renewed hope and happiness. May you make others as happy as you have made me, my angel of mercy."

Then he died with her holding his hand and the sadness she felt was mingled with a happiness of renewed hope and faith.

Miss Sadie was well.

THEY KNOW CANADA

Our Governors General Always Get Well Acquainted With This Dominion

High on the list of those who have a deep affection for Canada are a group of men, past and present, who have been merely temporary residents in this Dominion. These are our Governors General. Most of them, after a short time here, have become the most enthusiastic boosters for this country.

The reason, of course, is obvious. The Governors General see and know Canada. It is part of their job to travel across the Dominion, not once but several times during their terms of office. Their appreciation of our many advantages rests on intelligent familiarity with them.

Not everyone, of course, can see so much of the country; but too many of our citizens neglect opportunities to familiarize themselves even with the parts they could easily visit. Others, while the means to travel quite as extensively as the Governors General, prefer to spend their time and money in other climes. It is too bad that more of our people are not put under an obligation similar to that imposed on the Viceroy to get about in their native land.—Wonder Star.

Answer To Last Week's Puzzle

LITTLE DRAMAS OF HOME LIFE

Pop was writing the household cheques ... and suddenly blew his top!

It was as quick as that! All was serene in the household, with the Male Parent working in his den, the rest of the family scattered around. Then, all of a sudden, Pop exploded like a landmine.

What had happened to Pop? — Was it the bills? — no, they came every month. Was it the kids? — no, Pop usually took them in his stride. Was it — yes, this sounds like it — a caffeine hang-over? For Pop had been going it rather strong for tea and coffee recently.

Watch your nerves! Drink Postum — for its grand, rewarding flavor — and because it's the ideal way to stop drinking tea and coffee. Contains no caffeine to over-stimulate and upset you. Convenient — made right in the cup — economical — costs less than a cent a serving.

Fire prevention week was last last week. Did anybody clean out their smoke pipes and otherwise look their house over to prevent fire?

O. K. Crockett (Hogan) had the misfortune to badly bruise his forearm when cranking up his car. The crank handle flew off hitting in the arm. He has been unable to work for some days.

Mrs. N. Whitehorn of Calgary spent a day visiting Miss J. Kidd, matron of Blackfoot hospital. Mrs. Whitehorn was enroute to Bassano to visit her parents and daughter over the weekend holiday.

Judging by the procession of cars that streamed westward Monday evening most of the sportsmen of Calgary must have been hunting small game in the Brooks area. There must have been an immense number of hunters out because from dark until near ten o'clock there was to be seen a continuous string of headlights stretching from Cluny to Gleichen.

CARD OF THANKS

Upon my departure for Edmonton I wish to take this opportunity to thank a large number of people of Gleichen and district for the business they have given me during my residence in Gleichen.

Crop Improvement Associations

The Manitoba, Saskatchewan, and Alberta Crop Improvement Associations were organized to serve as provincial marketing agencies for the growers of Registered and Certified seed. In each province they are sponsored and directed by officials of seed growers' organizations, universities, Dominion and Provincial governments, and grain companies.

Object. The main object of these Associations is to facilitate the wider use of Registered and Certified seed of farm crops. This is accomplished by: (1) Establishing a fair and reasonable price to the grower and purchaser. (2) Enlisting the services of country elevator agents as salesmen. (3) Creating a wider demand for good seed. (4) Locating and maintaining adequate seed stocks to meet the demand. (5) Developing, if necessary, an export market for the disposal of surplus stocks.

Operation. Crop Improvement Associations operate in a simple and direct manner. They buy and own no seed but simply serve as a medium through which seed is moved from the seed grower to farmer through the elevator agent. All the farmer has to do is to place his order for Registered or Certified seed with his local elevator agent who forwards it to his Head Office, or to the Secretary of the provincial Association. The order is then directed to the seed grower who ships the seed to the elevator agent for delivery to the farmer. This service is provided by elevator companies and provincial Departments of Agriculture at their own expense. Line Elevator agents in all three provinces are fully authorized distributors of Registered and Certified seed for provincial crop improvement associations. It is anticipated that the demand for Registered and Certified stocks of cereal seeds, particularly of some of the newer varieties, will be heavy this year. Consequently, Line Elevator agents can render a valuable service to their farmer customers by encouraging them to place their orders as soon as possible. Order Registered and Certified seed now.

stabilization program should prove too strong to be resisted. The best answer to these pressures is restraint, the prices board points out. This should be the watchword for every Canadian consumer and producer. Restraint in consumer demands for goods in short supply, restraint in producer demands for increased returns.

Getting back to cost of living the recent increase which has taken place does not mean that price control has broken down. On the contrary, it shows that Canadians and their price control system are holding inflation in check. We must continue to hold it in check.

It is true that the upward pressure on our price levels are great and that

Talking to the Point

Our Illustrated Words Ad gets right down to the point at once. If you want something say so in plain, well chosen words. The intelligent reader finds that kind of straight-forwardness most desirable. And that is also reason why condensed Words Ads are so popular. They are the best kind of headline. Well-chosen wording or selling them will help you.

the end of the war has necessitated a certain amount of readjustment. But price control measures have been successful in limiting this readjustment to the minimum practical extent. Clearly indicated by the experience of the United States when the power of their price control agency expired; and by the record of the First Great War period.

GLEICHEN CALL

STREET SCENE - 1946

Government cheques come to this street every month. The Federer, for instance—he was wounded at Vimy. Now his Veterans are taking technical training on re-establishment grants. Other families receive Family Allowances. It's so easy—and private—no take cheques to the bank around the corner.

AN EXTRA cheque every second

You may receive Government cheques. You can cash them without charge at any branch of any chartered bank in Canada. In one year some thirty-six million cheques were issued for Family Allowances, the Armed Services, their dependents, Pensioners, employees of Crown Companies and the like. More than one for every second of the day and night!

Can you imagine the expense to taxpayers if this money had to be distributed in cash through thousands of special pay offices... and the inconvenience of having to go to such offices to get your money?

Taken in Stride

Your bank performed many such public services throughout the war and is continuing to do so. It is taking these additional tasks in stride... competent to play its part in meeting Canada's needs of the future.
